

JOURNAL OF APPLIED SPORT PSYCHOLOGY CALL FOR ASSOCIATE EDITOR (DIVERSITY/SOCIAL JUSTICE)

In order to work toward a submission/publication profile that reflects its audience in terms of racial diversity and particularly BIPOC representation, the Journal of Applied Sport Psychology (JASP; see <http://www.tandfonline.com/toc/uasp20/current>) is seeking to fill an Associate Editor position for a 3-year term with a start date of January 1, 2023. JASP highly encourages applications from BIPOC colleagues with diverse backgrounds and experiences.

JASP is a refereed journal designed to significantly advance thought, theory, and research on applied aspects of sport and exercise psychology. Submissions such as experimental studies, qualitative research, correlational studies, case studies, position papers, critical reviews, theoretical developments specific to applied research conducted in sport and/or exercise settings, or having significant applied implications to sport and exercise, are appropriate content for JASP.

JASP is a non-proprietary journal that is an official publication of the Association for Applied Sport Psychology (AASP). The Journal is a direct benefit of membership in AASP and is received by its student and professional members. The publisher of the JASP is Taylor and Francis, Philadelphia, PA.

The responsibilities of the JASP Associate Editor include the following tasks:

- Enhance the productivity and performance of JASP (e.g., increase submission rates, visibility of JASP to potential contributors and readers, etc.);
- Assign manuscripts to Editorial Board members and reviewers;
- Make decisions about manuscripts based on recommendations from the Editorial Board and reviewers;
- Oversee AASP and APA ethical codes and APA and JASP guidelines as they pertain to the journal operations; and
- Nominate potential Associate Editors and Editorial Board members to the JASP Editor.

Associate Editor positions are three years in length with the potential for reappointment to a second term upon review and carry an annual stipend.

Application:

To apply, candidates should send a brief (500-word maximum) statement of interest that addresses their fit for the role and a two-page summary curriculum vitae/resume. The successful applicant will demonstrate evidence of the following:

- A doctoral-level qualification in applied sport/exercise psychology or related area.
- Editorial Board (or commensurate) experience for peer review journals.
- A thorough and diverse knowledge of applied sport and exercise psychology.
- Evidence of Equity, Diversity, Inclusion, Advocacy, and Social Justice engagement.
- A track record of outstanding theory and/or practice work within the field.

Applications will be evaluated by a JASP Editorial panel and AASP Publication/Information Division Head.

Applications should be assembled as a single PDF file and emailed to Dr. Chris Wagstaff, JASP Editor-in-Chief (chris.wagstaff@port.ac.uk) and Ale Quartiroli, AASP Publication/Information Division Head (aquartiroli@uwlax.edu). The application deadline is July 1, 2022 at 12 noon (GMT).

Inquiries about the position should be sent to Dr Chris Wagstaff (chris.wagstaff@port.ac.uk).
